Discussions on Perennial Philosophy Plotinus, Paul Brunton, and Cosmic Astrology by Anthony Damiani

“After all, the greatest joy that a human being can have is to try to fathom the Unfathomable.”

—Anthony Damiani, American Philosopher

This book is based on a three-day meeting that Anthony Damiani (1922–1984) had with students near the end of his life. Damiani’s was a uniquely comparative and visionary approach to the perennial wisdom tradition, basing his work primarily in the Neoplatonic philosophy of Plotinus and the writings of Paul Brunton. Using astrological symbolism that was available in all the great traditions, Damiani presents a profound way of understanding the Living Cosmos, the Body of God, as a rich source of Wisdom.

Here is a short excerpt from #120 – Paul Brunton Philosophic Foundation:

“The indispensable prerequisite to mystical illumination is self-surrender. None can receive it without paying this price. Any person in any degree of development may pay it — they have to turn around, change their attitude, and accept the Christ, the higher self, as their sovereign. But once this happens and the Grace of illumination descends, it can affect the self only as it finds the self. An unbalanced ego will not suddenly become balanced. An unintellectual one will not suddenly become learned. Their imperfections remain though the light shines through them.” [18:4.70]

Truth: Where Illumined Minds Meet

Love and Forgiveness: The Only Way Forward, #3

Jesus said: "A new commandment give I to you, that ye love one another, as I have loved you." The Israelites, to whom these words were addressed, were governed by the code of "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth." What Jesus taught was certainly new to them, but not to Asia. Buddha and Krishna, Lao Tzu and Confucius, had taught it long before.

Overviews of the Quest and the PB Archive

Louis Damiani is creating two series of videos. An "Overview of the Quest" (discussions of PB's ideas with Lou DeSarno), and "A Guided Overview of the PB Archive" (interviews with PB archivist Timothy Smith). You can easily find them on our YouTube Channel: (i) Paul Brunton Philosophic Foundation - YouTube

Preparing for Death and the After-Death States Essential Teachings – Paul Brunton

Dying presents a unique opportunity for those on a spiritual path. Paul Brunton offers a practical approach, based on a wide range of spiritual traditions as well as his own deep insight. Included are two exercises for preparing, not only for death, but also for the after-death stages.
